“ My husband told Arlie that she didn't have to fall to get him to come over to see her, she could just call and he would come over. She was fragile but such a strong woman! She loved her family so much and hated to be a burden. She told me how much it hurts her to be so needy. I told her that she is Being in the life of her daughter, granddaughter and great grand kids, that's what is important. We all have things that keep us from doing or being the person's we once were, but if we can just Be in our family's lives as long as we can, it is the love that makes it important, the memories created. Love and prayers to all of her family.

Love
